

GEOGRAPHY

MERSEYSIDE LABOUR MARKET

Geographers have enviable transferable skills that lend themselves to careers across the Armed Forces, the Civil Service. Charities, Public Services, environmental agencies and utility companies to name but a few. With such wide-reaching skills, employers from the legal, business and finance sectors could open up opportunities across the UK. The skills gained from studying Geography are transferable to other settings. This subject can help you develop a sense of social responsibility as well as other skills such as communication, being analytical and problem solving.

LABOUR MARKET

6,999

People approx. are employed in careers that make use of Geography across Merseyside

4,939

Natural and social science professionals

158

Conservation and environmental associates and professionals

1,818

Transportation

84

Mining and quarrying

OTHER SECTORS

Creative and Digital Industries
Renewable Energy and the Environment
Advanced Manufacturing and Engineering
Health and Social Care Technologies