

MUSIC

MERSEYSIDE LABOUR MARKET

The UK music industry contributes around £5.8billion to the UK economy, employing just under 200,000 people pre-covid. The industry needs innovative and forward-thinking individuals in the next few years to re-build the enviable reputation across the globe. Resilience, flexibility and creativity are crucial skills to embrace. A career in Music combines creativity, performance, technical expertise and a determination to succeed as competition for jobs is high. However, there are many different roles available ranging from choreographer, sound engineer, radio broadcaster and of course, musician. Photographers, Audio-visual and Broadcasting Equipment Operators in Merseyside can earn an average of £27,500 per year.
